

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

Highly branched alkenyl-functional organopolysiloxane polymers are highly efficient antimisting additives for use in the preparation of silicone release coatings in high speed coating operations. The antimisting additives are miscible with the crosslinkable silicone coating components and produce storage stable compositions which can be used to provide coatings with good release properties.